Conservative CU Newspaper Plans 1st Issue

Special to The Rocky Mountain News
BOULDER, Aug. 30—First issue of the New Conservative, projected unofficial student weekly newspaper at the University of Colorado, is scheduled for Wednesday, Sept. 19.

Editor Charles Adams said Thursday publication of the new paper has been assured by donations totaling $9000 toward the budget of $25,000 which has been set for the first year's operation.

Sponsors of the paper, the Conservative Club, are seeking $15,000 of the total from public contributions.

Staff Members

At the same time, Adams announced appointment of staff members for the publication.

Miss Carolyn Allen, an honors program sophomore, will be managing editor. She has experience in yearbook editing and served this summer as news editor of the Colorado Daily.

The New Conservative is being established to compete with the Daily, official student paper charged by liberals with conservatives with liberal bias and incomplete news coverage.

Adams said other key staff positions on the New Conservative will be filled by:

David L. Jarrett, graduate student in finance, as business manager. Jarrett has worked as chief photographer for the Coloradoan, CU yearbook and for the Daily.

Ad Manager

Gerard Pierce, junior studying English literature and electrical engineering, as advertising manager. Pierce transferred to CU from Regis College in Denver. He worked as advertising salesman for a Denver radio station and formerly was editor of the Regis High School newspaper.

Dr. Warren Carroll, second year law student, as columnist and proofreader. Dr. Carroll earned his A.B. degree summa cum laude from Bates College and has M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in American history from Columbia University. He taught for a year at Indiana University, worked as an analyst for the Central Intelligence Agency and in 1960-61 was assistant command historian for the Strategic Air Command. Editor Adams is an honor graduate of East High School in Denver and has attended eight colleges and universities.

Before entering CU in January, he spent two years in Japan as a Russian interpreter for the Army. As a linguist, Adams has studied five languages and currently is learning a sixth, Chinese.
